Accepting Our Crosses

Fr James Martin, SJ

Sometimes we think of "accepting our cross" in a morbid way, as in God wants us to suffer, or demands that we suffer. But usually, accepting our crosses means just accepting the imperfections of our lives, things we cannot change, or a lack or a longing that goes along with the life we've chosen. Every choice means a renunciation, and since every life is a series of choices every life will have some crosses.
